On Tuesday, RedEye kicks off its first-ever Virtual Kitchen Stadium.

What's that, you ask? If your TV is always set to Food Network and you're always on Twitter, have we got the cooking competition for you.

Follow the culinary madness by following us at @redeyemunchtime on Twitter, where we will be tweeting out the week's secret ingredient/challenge and our contestants—who are all from Chicago—will be throwing down and engaging in some Twitter trash talk.

Also check out our blog, tr.im/munchtime, to see what they cook up and vote for your favorite dish. Winners will be named by a special celebrity guest judge, Chicago's own Rick Bayless!

Check the blog by Thursday night for Rick's vote and the popular vote.

Meet this week's contestants, who answer the question, "Why did you want to participate in this virtual cookoff?"

PULLOUT BEGINS

ALL EYES ON IRAQ SECURITY AS U.S. TROOPS WITHDRAW FROM CITIES

Associated Press

BAGHDAD Hours before the deadline for U.S. combat troops to withdraw from Iraqi cities, the top American military commander in the Middle East expressed confidence Monday that Iraqi security forces are ready despite a string of deadly bombings in recent days.

The blasts, which have killed more than 250 people in a little over a week, have raised concerns that violence will spike in Iraq's urban areas after the last U.S. troops leave. But the Iraqi government has said its forces are prepared and has declared Tuesday "National Sovereignty Day," a public holiday that will be marked by festivities.

The celebrations began Monday in Baghdad as patriotic songs rang out from speakers mounted at police stations and military checkpoints. Iraqi military vehicles decorated with flowers and Iraqi flags patrolled the city.

U.S. combat troops must withdraw from Iraqi cities by June 30 according to a security agreement that also requires all American forces to leave the country by the end of 2011. Some Americans will remain in the cities as trainers and advisers, but the bulk of the more than 130,000 U.S. troops in Iraq have assembled in large bases outside urban centers.

Interior Minister Jawad al-Bolani told The Associated Press that when the sun rises on Tuesday "Iraqi citizens will see no U.S. soldiers in their cities. They will see only Iraqi troops protecting them."

The commander of U.S. troops in the Middle East, Gen. David Petraeus, expressed concern about the recent spate of high-profile bombings but said the average daily number of attacks remained low at 10 to 15 compared with 160 in June 2007.

"While certainly there will be challenges—there are many difficult political issues, social issues, governmental development issues—we feel confident in the Iraqi security forces continuing the process of taking over the security tasks in their own country," said Petraeus after meeting with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Cairo.

The top U.S. military commander in Baghdad, Maj. Gen. Daniel Bolger, echoed Petraeus' confidence, saying he believes Iraqi troops can effectively safeguard the capital's 5 million people.

Bolger handed over a symbolic gold key to the defense ministry to Lt. Gen. Abboud Gambar, the chief of operations for Baghdad.

CAUSE FOR CELEBRATION

The Iraqi government plans to hold a large party Tuesday in one of Baghdad's main parks on the west side of the Tigris River that will include popular singers and fireworks. The celebration will be broadcast on the other side of the river on a giant screen that was being installed Monday.

Madoff receives 150 years in prison

Associated Press

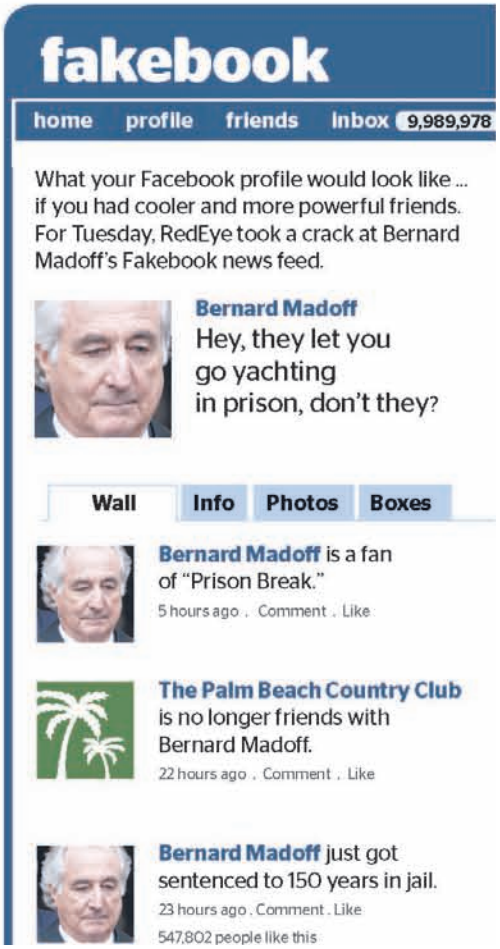
Convicted Wall Street swindler Bernard Madoff was sentenced to 150 years in prison Monday for a fraud so extensive that the judge said he needed to send a message to potential imitators and to victims who demanded harsh punishment.

Scattered applause and whoops broke out in the crowded Manhattan courtroom after U.S. District Judge Denny Chin issued the maximum sentence to the 71-year-old defendant, who said he lives "in a tormented state now, knowing all the pain and suffering I've created."

Chin rejected a request by Madoff's lawyer for leniency and said he disagreed that victims of the Ponzi scheme were seeking mob vengeance.

Madoff showed no emotion earlier in the hearing as he listened to nine victims spend nearly an hour describing their despair. Some openly wept. Others raised their voices in anger.

"Life has been a living hell. It feels like the nightmare we can't wake from," said Carla Hirshhorn.



What your Facebook profile would look like ... if you had cooler and more powerful friends. For Tuesday, RedEye took a crack at Bernard Madoff's Fakebook news feed.

What would you say to save your bus?

going public

TRACY SWARTZ
tswartz@tribune.com

What if your bus line was eliminated? Consider this: The CTA is mulling elimination of the No. 200-Main Shuttle, which travels along Main Street in Evanston to Skokie during rush hours.

The bus route has been logging fewer than 100 rides per day since January, when Rand McNally moved its headquarters to a different Skokie location, according to the CTA. The CTA plans to hold a hearing about the bus route this summer.

Despite low ridership, the No. 200 is a "much-needed bus," said Robert Lewis, a Purple Line customer assistant who works at the Main Street Station, which connects to the No. 200.

"People really depend on that 200 bus," said Lewis, who added he does not speak on behalf of the CTA. "I think it would affect a lot of people."

More bus cuts may be on the way—and not because of low ridership. The CTA is facing a $35 million budget shortfall and is "reviewing all options to fill the budget deficit," spokeswoman Sheila Gregory told RedEye. Specific service changes have yet to be announced.

In the meantime, we asked RedEye's Twitter followers this question: If the CTA chose to cut service, what would you say to try to convince CTA chief Rich Rodriguez to keep it going? Here are some of the replies.

@salkken cta cuts usually come down without regard to passenger protests. One question: can we have our .25% cta tax surcharge back?

@TerezBaskin If you want a riot in the streets? Go right ahead. The N side and S side will finally unite just to tear this place apart.

@BlackCanseco CTA's been cuttin service 2 south/west sides for yrs... now that more "mainstream" folks are hurting it's an issue? ha!

@laman Bus service is bad enough already, if it gets any worse I don't know many who'll keep using it.

@alissas I would just ask: Would you like even MORE cars on the road during rush hour? And how do you plan to magically create the necessary parking?

@jrrtubbs To me, its common sense. "Cut the number of routes if you must, but rework and expand other routes to cover for it."

RIDER'S BLOCK

My pledge to ride every CTA bus line continues. I rode the No. 68-Northwest-Highway bus this week and boiled my review down to 140 characters, the size of a Twitter tweet. @tracyswartz Hello, suburbia! Jefferson Park Blue Line station to Park Ridge Metra in 16 mins. Riders see clear line btwn gritty city and Wisteria Lane. Next up: No. 20-Madison.

Stolen car hits bus

A suspected car thief who was being tailed by police hit a CTA bus late Sunday night, injuring himself and eight bus passengers, Chicago police said Monday. Police spotted the stolen Mercedes shortly before midnight at 8300 S. Holland Rd. in West Chatham and began to follow it, police said in a news release. The No. 79 bus sustained damage to the rear, said CTA spokeswoman Kim Myles. She described the passenger injuries as "minor."

Daley demotes Streets and Sanitation boss

Mayor Daley on Monday demoted his Streets and Sanitation commissioner and replaced him with a troubleshooter from another department. Michael Picardi will return to his old job running the Fleet Management department after rising through the City Hall ranks to become Streets and Sanitation boss in 2005. Picardi will be replaced by Thomas Byrne, the city's transportation commissioner. Picardi's department was the subject of criticism in two key areas in 2008—garbage pick-up and snow removal.

Metra starts Sox station

More than a year behind schedule, Metra broke ground Monday on a new station at 35th Street on the Rock Island District Line to serve White Sox fans and college students while giving neighborhood residents another mass-transit option. The station, at 35th and Federal Streets, is expected to open in the fall of 2010. The station also is near the IIT campus, Bronzeville, a new technology park and the De La Salle Institute.

Man sentenced in beating death

A man who beat a widowed St. Charles mother of four to death with a hammer while she was delivering pizza was sentenced Monday to 81 years in prison. Bradley Justice, 31, of Sandwich showed no emotion when DuPage County Judge Peter Dockery called him "cold, malicious, vicious, grossly ruthless and motivated to buy drugs" while sentencing him for the 2006 murder of Karen Hassan, 41.

Ruth Terefe (above), who grew up in Ethiopia, said she would buy her home again. Her disappointment stems from a steep rise in condo fees. When she bought in April 2006, she paid $270 per month. Now, for six months, Terefe said she must pay $620 to cover for owners struggling or in foreclosure. JOSE M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

Mixed review on housing

Chicago Tribune

Low-income apartment dwellers and middle-class condo owners have shared Westhaven Park Tower since the building opened in 2006—an innovative setup that the city hoped would unite residents and exemplify Chicago's $1.6 billion overhaul of public housing.

Proximity, however, has not led to harmony.

The most recent skirmish inside the 113-unit midrise on Hermitage Avenue on the West Side concerned building security. Another flare-up centered on the proper use of the lobby: Public housing residents—who make up a third of the building—saw it as a place to hang out; condo owners did not.

Kathy Quickery, president of the building's condominium association, put it bluntly in a letter to the CHA last month: "After living in the building for three years, I consider the project a failure for homeowners."

The mixed-income building is part of a local and national movement to house poor families side by side with working professionals instead of segregating them in dilapidated ghettos. Critics and supporters of the idea note that there have been conflicts. But they disagree about whether the tower's troubles show the CHA's overall effort is struggling.

"There's no question there is tension," said Westhaven's developer, Rich Sciortino. He said "95 percent" of the problems stemmed from residents and "problematic" guests who live in four of the 34 CHA units. "The remaining 30 are just as upset about the nuisance. Nobody wants to live in that environment."

At Westhaven, residents and owners complained that hostility has marred the spirit of the building.

Lester Roper, a public housing resident, described the relations between some owners and CHA residents as "very antagonistic."

"It's a hum ... you definitely feel it," Roper said.

He believes the disagreement cuts along racial lines. Most of the CHA residents are black, and the condo owners and their renters are more racially diverse.

But Antwan Dobson, an owner and former condo president who is black, argues the problems have been more about lifestyle differences. Dobson, who was raised by a foster parent on the West Side, said he understands isolation and struggle.

But Dobson played a central role in what grew into one of the first big skirmishes between owners and CHA residents at Westhaven. In fall 2006, Dobson, then condo president, said he received calls from real estate agents who complained that residents were lounging in the lobby, making the building less attractive to buyers.

He confronted some residents, but many bristled and kept meeting there.

Then Dobson, with help from a caretaker, removed the lobby furniture and locked it in a room restricted for use by condo owners.

Sciortino said he stepped in, talked to residents and worked with the condo board to return the furniture. "I thought that was a very heavy-handed way of dealing with this," he said of the removal.

Matt Aguilar, a CHA spokesman, defended the mixed-income model used at Westhaven and 14 developments across the city.

"We know from residents' stories and available data that mixed-income communities work," he wrote in a prepared statement. "They are ... attracting diverse populations due to their great value and locations."

Honduras coup blasted

6 TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras Police and soldiers clashed with thousands of protesters outside Honduras' national palace Monday as world leaders from Barack Obama to Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez demanded the return of a president ousted in a military coup.

Leftist leaders pulled their ambassadors from Honduras and Chavez called for Hondurans to rise up against those who toppled his ally, Manuel Zelaya.

"We're ready to support the rebellion of the Honduran people," Chavez said.

Protests outside the presidential palace grew from hundreds to thousands, and in the afternoon soldiers and police advanced behind riot shields, using tear gas to scatter the protesters. The demonstrators, many of them choking on the gas, hurled rocks and bottles.

Security forces fired rifles, but it was not clear whether they were using live ammunition. There were no immediate confirmations of injuries.

In Washington, Obama said the U.S. will "stand on the side of democracy" and work with other nations and international groups to resolve the matter peacefully.

The Organization of American States called an emergency meeting for Tuesday to consider suspending Honduras under an agreement meant to prevent the sort of coups that for generations made Latin America a tragic spawning ground of military dictatorships.

The new government, however, was defiant. Roberto Micheletti, named by the Honduran Congress to serve out the final seven months of Zelaya's term, vowed to ignore foreign pressure.

"We respect everybody and we ask only that they respect us and leave us in peace because the country is headed toward free and transparent general elections in November," Micheletti told HRN radio.

Grooms targeted in anti-smoking drive

7 RIYADH, Saudi Arabia The catchy slogan "Kicking the habit is on you, and marriage is on us," is meant to entice young grooms to give up smoking by offering an attractive incentive — an all-expenses-paid wedding.

And, indeed, hundreds have expressed interest in the first anti-smoking drive of its kind in the kingdom. In much of the Arab world, the groom alone bears the cost of getting married, including an expensive party, a dowry and a fully furnished house.

Several commentators have complained the campaign is turning women into a commodity, but organizers say they're thrilled to get people talking about the dangers of smoking. About one-quarter of Saudi Arabia's 27.6 million residents indulge.

Bulls on parade

Draft picks Gibson and Johnson unveiled at United Center

Chicago Tribune

So, they meet again.

Seemingly every time Taj Gibson boarded the elevator at the downtown Chicago hotel where the NBA staged its predraft camp in late May, James Johnson's smile greeted him.

Little did Gibson then know the same smile would be flashing next to him from a United Center dais on Monday morning, where the Bulls unveiled their new draft picks at a news conference.

"He's a funny guy, and I've already grown close to him," Gibson said. "I like the way he carries himself. I look forward to working with him."

Work seemed the operative word as both Johnson and Gibson talked like benchwarmers rather than first-round picks poised to sign guaranteed two-year contracts.

"I'm going to come in early, get situated, work on my game a lot more," Johnson said. "Hopefully, I'm blessed to get in the rotation. If not, I'm going to be a great practice player."

Said Gibson: "It's all about working to help win games. I've always been the type of player who can fill a need for a team."

> "I grew up getting toughed up, roughed up. That's how we all were. We were all competitive. Playing basketball or fighting, we went hard at it."
> JAMES JOHNSON
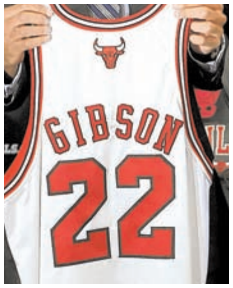
> on growing up in a martial arts family of nine children

Johnson and Gibson will headline a rookie mini-camp at the Berto Center that begins July 8. The Bulls then begin summer-league play in Las Vegas on July 14 against Golden State.

"I don't think my game is ever going to stop growing," Johnson said. "If a 5th grader had a nice crossover, I'd take it. Every time I see a move I like, I work at it and try to put it in my game."

Johnson, who played point guard in high school, reiterated his preference to play small forward despite playing power forward at Wake Forest. At 6 foot 8 and close to 260 pounds, the Bulls envision Johnson creating matchup problems.

"One of the things that impressed us about James when we scouted him was he could make plays off the dribble," General Manager Gar Forman said. "We saw him penetrate the lane and either dish to bigs or kick to shooters in the corner. That gives you versatility with how to attack a defense."



New jerseys?

It's been quite a while since Bulls players wore jersey Nos. 16 and 22. James Johnson will wear 16, which last was worn by Quintin Dailey for one game in 1984. Taj Gibson will sport No. 22, last worn by Jay Williams. What other athletes have filled the 16 and 22 jerseys? Not a bad bunch. REDEYE

1 After all the City Series hoopla, the Sox are five games out of first. Your forecast for them?	This is a mediocre team. They fold in July, sell off Dye by Aug. 1.	To sell tickets, they'll dress Getz, Beckham and Ramirez like the Jonas brothers—a moral dilemma for Jimmy.	Dye, Thome, Paulie, AJ, CQ, Pods, Alexei, Danks, Jenks and Buehrle all get traded.	Win the division. Carlos Quentin will be a jolt for the South Siders come playoff time.	We have to see if the Tigers follow Chrysler in taking the bailout and then be sold off to Fiat. @DrinkWrigleyvle
2 What would you do about Carlos Zambrano?	Let him pitch and get rid of whoever let the Cardinals get DeRosa for squat.	Work with him on his arm angle. Lately he's looked a little off when he's beating up the drink machine.	He should enroll in the Mark Grace School of Slump-busting.	Duct tape him to the foul pole at the Cell and let drunken Sox fans pour beer on him.	Trade him for a new Gatorade machine. @wildbill77
3 Why does drama always follow the Cubs?	OK, enough baseball questions. This season is making me ill.	Is that drama? I always thought it was the Grim Reaper.	Because they're my team, and none of this is real, and you are all robots.	Because of the cat, the goat, Bartman and the Babe. Cubs fans wouldn't have it any other way.	For the answer, tune in next week for Comcast's new reality show "Real Cubswives of Chicago" @plamorte
4 By the time baseball's All-Star break arrives ...	Didn't you hear what I just said?	... the Nationals will have been demoted to the Venezuelan Winter League.	... Aramis had better arrive too.	... Mark DeRosa will be booed by Cubs fans and Frank Thomas will sign with the Sox so he can retire.	... we will have endured 4,000 hours of additional Michael Jackson coverage. @salaminizer
5 It's the second week of Wimbledon. How does your bracket look?	Pretty good in the Grunting regional but way off in the You Can't Be Serious! regional.	I knew I should have gone with the Lakers.	Meh. Gonzaga and Purdue screwed it all up.	Looking good. The Williams sisters are still in it. Can you say finals?	I've used the same strategy since '93—Sampras takes it all. @BC13

Break-even point

CLEVELAND Gavin Floyd shut out Cleveland on five singles over $7\,{}^{2}/_{3}$ innings and the surging White Sox climbed back to .500 with a 6-3 win Monday night over the free-falling Indians, who lost for the 11th time in 13 games.

Floyd (6-5), who started the season by losing four of his first six decisions, improved to 3-0 in June, 4-1 since May 22 and has a 1.39 ERA in his last eight starts. The right-hander walked two, struck out five and escaped a bases-loaded threat in the seventh with a head's-up fielding play.

Floyd charged off the mound, scooped Ryan Garko's slow roller as it trickled up the first-base chalk and threw to first for the inning's final out. Floyd was lifted in the eighth by manager Ozzie Guillen with a runner on and Grady Sizemore coming up. Matt Thornton came on and got Sizemore to swing at his first pitch and lift a harmless fly out to left.

Jermaine Dye and Gordon Beckham had RBI singles off Carl Pavano (6-7) as the White Sox won for the 10th time in 14 games.

The White Sox got a scare in the ninth when shortstop Alexei Ramirez was beaned by Chris Perez. Ramirez dropped to the ground after being struck on the helmet by the right-hander's fastball. Ramirez was checked by a White Sox trainer before being assisted from the field.

CUBS, SOX HITS

» White Sox right fielder Jermaine Dye was named American League co-player of the week ending Sunday with New York Yankees closer Mariano Rivera. Dye batted .435 with two home runs and seven RBIs.

» Cubs manager Lou Piniella said Aramis Ramirez would begin his minor-league rehab stint on Thursday if all goes well the next three days during batting practice. Piniella did not know where Ramirez would be playing, but he expects to get him 20-25 at-bats.

» The Cubs called up Triple-A Iowa outfielder Sam Fuld on Monday to replace Aaron Miles, who was placed on the 15-day disabled list with a hyper-extended right elbow.

CUBS 3, PITTSBURGH 1

Harden

PITTSBURGH Rich Harden repeatedly worked out of trouble to win for the first time in more than six weeks, Ryan Theriot homered, and the Cubs maintained their mastery of the Pittsburgh Pirates by winning 3-1 on Monday night.

The Cubs were 1-6 on a 10-game trip that included manager Lou Piniella's run-in with Milton Bradley and 14-24 overall on the road before winning their eighth in their last 10 in Pittsburgh. They have won 20 of their last 25 games there.

The Pirates, who only wish they had the kind of success in PNC Park the Cubs do, had numerous chances to get to Harden (5-4), who was 0-3 with a 5.64 ERA in four starts since last winning May 12. They never did.

New on the scene

By M. Kathleen Pratt and Erin Osmon

The latest wave of restaurant openings delivers flavors from around the world at prices that won't put a dent in your summer budget.

90 Miles Cuban Cafe

2540 W. Armitage Ave.
773-227-2822

Got a good thing going? Double down! Though the original 90 Miles Cuban Cafe on Clybourn Avenue isn't yet a year old, owner Alberto Gonzalez already has spun off this larger sister spot in Logan Square. Look for all of the Cuban sandwiches and traditional dinner plates that made the first location so popular, plus expanded entree options, including arroz con pollo (Cuban-style paella) and oxtail stew.

Little Bucharest Bistro

3661 N. Elston Ave.
773-604-8500

Chef Andre Christopher's out at the Grocery Bistro and in at this Irving Park spot, where he's teamed up with seasoned restaurateur Branko Podrumedic to offer modern takes on Romanian, Serbian and Hungarian flavors.

Hot Woks Cool Sushi

30 S. Michigan Ave.
312-345-1234

The Irving Park location of this pan-Asian restaurant got off to such a strong start last year that Lois Lee, who owns the spot with her husband, David, didn't waste any time opening a second with a nearly identical menu. Two additions: bento boxes and a liquor license. Look for wine, beer and sake to start, with fun Polynesian cocktails on the way.

Bucktown Soup Cafe

1840 N. Damen Ave.
773-904-8364

Dino Agudo loves soup so much that he left behind his life as an attorney to open this all-natural soup joint in Bucktown. The bright counter-service cafe features a seasonal rotation of about 90 different soups, from Italian wedding to minestrone to lobster bisque.

Siboney Cuban Cuisine

2165 N. Western Ave.
773-904-7210

Two first-time restaurateurs convinced a favorite Cuban chef with a fine dining background to pack up and move to the States to help them carry out their vision at this lively spot offering both home-style Cuban fare and more refined Cuban dishes influenced by French and Italian techniques. Siboney is BYOB for now with a full bar to come.

Yolk

747 N. Wells St. 312-787-2277

The most important meal of the day stars at this River North sibling to the popular South Loop spot of the same name. Look for the same lengthy morning and mid-day lineups, including plenty of choices incorporating the namesake ingredient (and the whites too). Omelets, skillets and scramblers star on the breakfast portion of the menu; sandwiches, salads, wraps and burgers step up for lunch.

More June openings

» Istanbul Restaurant, a casual Lakeview BYOB turning out fresh-baked Turkish breads, kebabs and more

» Felony Franks, a West Side hot dog stand with an earnest mission to rehabilitate convicted criminals (and serve you Misdemeanor Weiners)

» Fogo 2 Go, a Lincoln Park quick-serve dishing out brick-oven pizza slices and Brazilian snacks

» Chicago's Dog House, an upscale alternative to the usual Lincoln Park hot dog stand, serving sausages made from the likes of ribeye, smoked duck and applewood smoked lamb

» Zebda, a carryout-focused North African and Mediterranean spot at the edge of Albany Park

» Angin Mamiri, an affordable and authentic taste of Indonesia in Rogers Park

» I Dream of Falafel, a Loop lunch spot dishing out made-to-order Middle Eastern eats

Undead beauty contest

Who's the hottest? "Twilight" vamp Edward Cullen would win hands down if you ask the teen scene, but there are plenty of other smoking-hot nightwalkers roaming the pop culture landscape. Go to redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles to tell Kyra whether you agree or disagree with her picks. May the best vamp win. K.K.

« Bill
"True Blood"
Sexy and exuding Southern charm, the only way Bill could get any hotter is if he stood out in the sun. But he shouldn't test that theory. Last time he did, he almost burned to cinders and had to hide out in a grave.

Eric "True Blood" **»
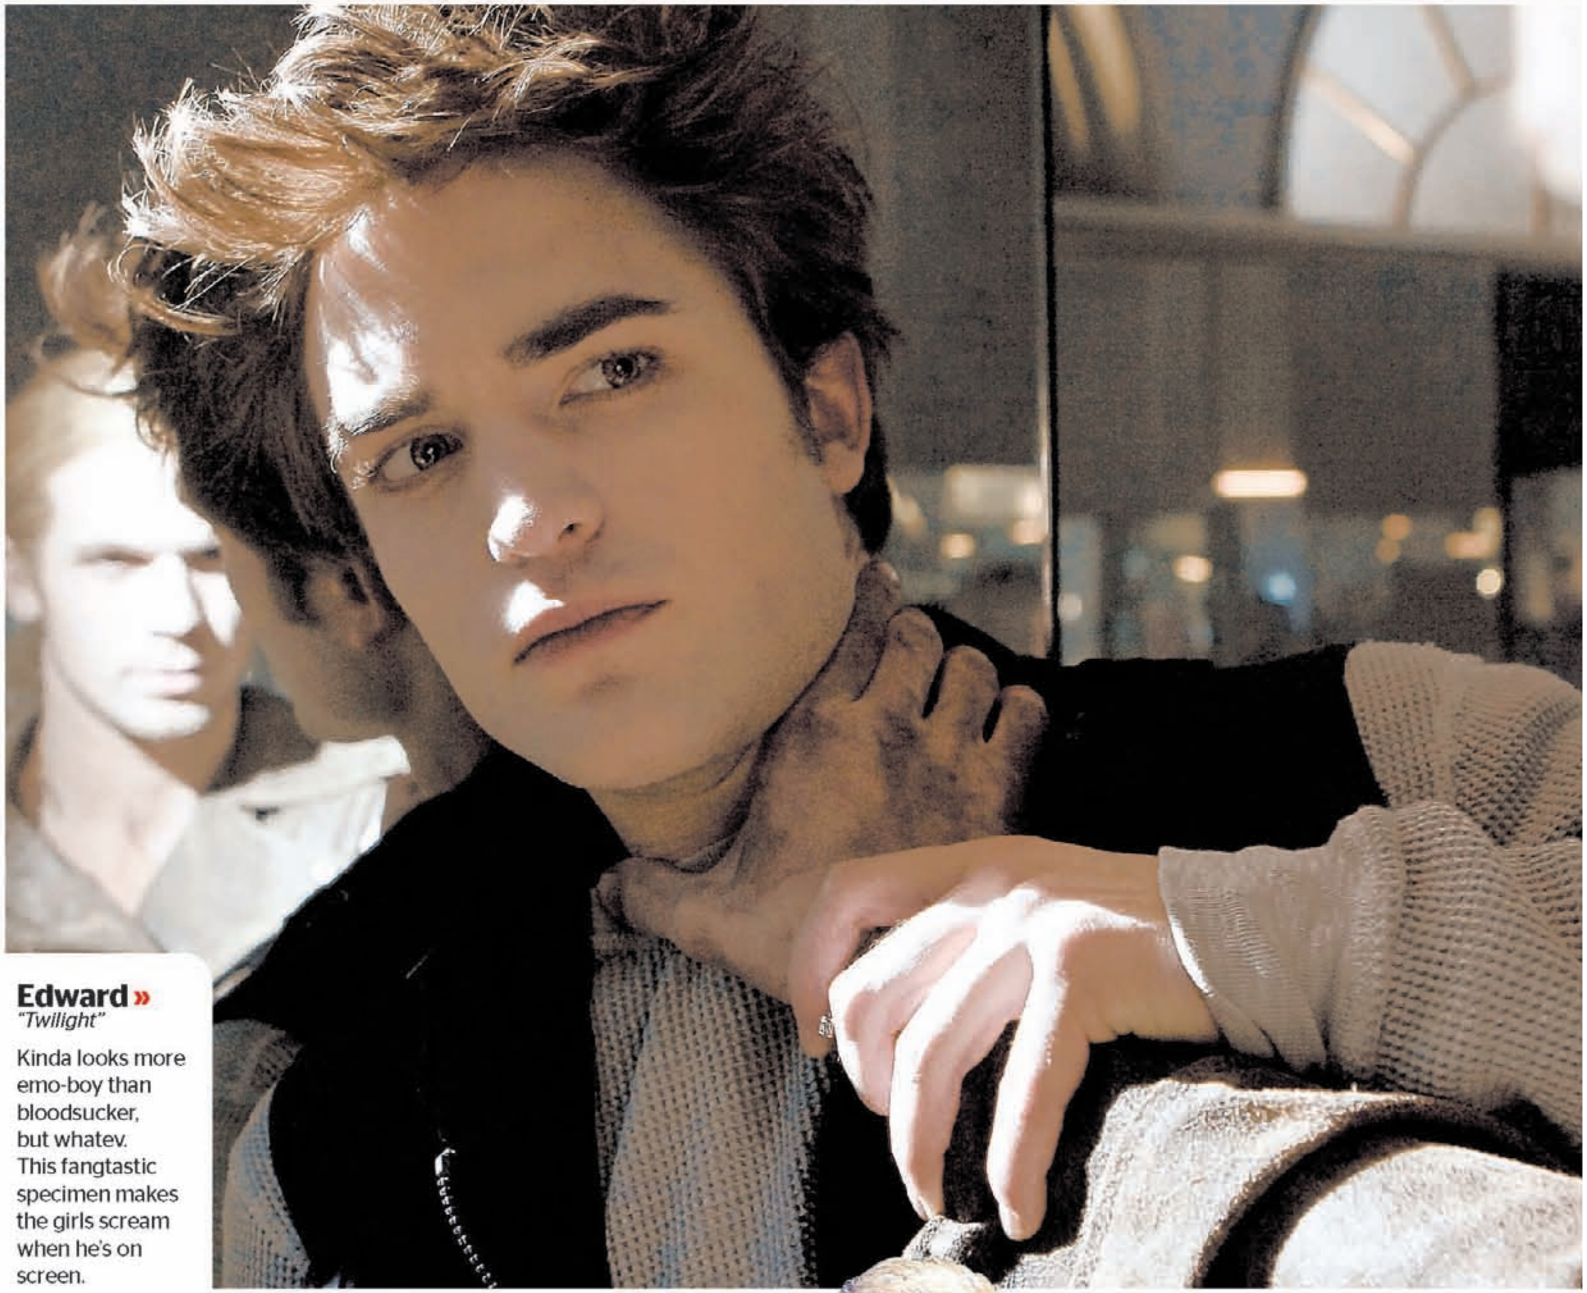
He's definitely got that Kurt Cobain thing going on, and oh, those heavenly highlights. Eric shows off his ability to glamor (hypnotize) his prey, but this Viking hottie had us at "Hello."

HBO PHOTO



Edward »
"Twilight"
Kinda looks more emo-boy than bloodsucker, but whatev. This fangtastic specimen makes the girls scream when he's on screen.

« Angel
"Buffy the Vampire Slayer"
This tormented but good-hearted guy was the greatest love of Buffy's life, but he had to leave her hanging when he scored his own show and an investigation agency to boot.

Spike »
"Buffy the Vampire Slayer"
Spike brought the Billy Idol look back with a vengeance—and with a sexy British accent. The "Slayer" character went from enemy to love interest for the titular star.

« Blade
"Blade" film series
This ice-cold half-vamp turned the tables on the genre by exterminating his own kind. But the muscular, leather-loving Blade and his oft-featured fangs looked damn good doing it.

Vampire Brides "Van Helsing"
Screechy, whiny and obnoxious, yes, but definitely hot. And talk about fly ... these ladies even had wings.

Fang-demonium

Fans are bloodthirsty for vamps, but some die-hards think the modern versions suck

SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT

By Kyra Kyles
REDEYE

That tousled, yet touchable hair.

Those dreamy, fathomless eyes.

That bad-boy brooding.

And oh yes, the ability to live forever in the same sexy mortal coil in which they were turned.

It's no surprise that women and men alike swoon over fictional vampires, from "Twilight's" tween dream, Edward Cullen (Robert Pattinson), to the decidedly more mature Bill Compton (Stephen Moyer) of HBO's "True Blood."

"Twilight," which proved a blockbuster when it came out last year, has spawned a highly anticipated sequel, "New Moon," set for a November release.

Also this fall, The CW is serving up "The Vampire Diaries," a teen drama about the romance between a popular girl and a boyishly handsome but centuries-old bloodsucker named Stefan Salvatore. "Diaries," which debuts Sept. 10, is based on a successful book series of the same name.

There is even a "New Vampire's Handbook," penned by a comedy writing group that includes University of Chicago, Second City and Onion alum Scott Sherman.

"The book is written from the perspective of a nearly 500-year-old vampire by the name of Miles Proctor," said Sherman, 27, of the tongue-in-cheek tips for a newbie vampire. "We like to target the zeitgeist of the moment. There's not a lot that's bigger than vampires right now."

It's official: The fang gang is taking over pop culture.

Local vampire super-fans expressed excitement about the development to RedEye, some of whom trace their love for the blood-lusting beasts all the way back to childhood brushes with classics "Nosferatu" (1922) and "Dracula" (1931).

The academic community is taking heed of fang fascination as well. Aurora University assistant professor Donovan Gwinner recently offered a short course covering material from Bram Stoker's "Dracula" to Anne Rice's comprehensive series of books, "The Vampire Chronicles."

When he offered the course in May, "Got Blood? Vampires in Literature, Film and Popular Culture" attracted intrigue, according to Gwinner, an assistant professor of English at the school.

"It was received pretty enthusiastically," said Gwinner, adding that intense interest in "Twilight" inspired him to dream up the offering.

But the popularity of their favorite mysterious monsters comes with drawbacks, some Chicago vamp fans said, including a growing disgust with what some described as the dumbing down of vampire lore. Self-described purists and fans of more vicious vamps are cringing over the increased focus on vampire-human love stories and the bending of traditional vampire rules.

" 'Twilight' is killing the genre," Orland Park's Dan Coglianese told RedEye. The 30-year-old "huge horror fan" vowed never to watch the films after hearing them described by friends and determining that the movies "take away all that a vampire is."

He took particular umbrage with the "Twilight" vamps' ability to survive sunlight. He isn't excited about "Vampire Diaries," either.

"Vampires don't stand around gazing at human girls and staring like all they want is to ask you to prom," said Coglianese, with obvious scorn. "Vampires aren't going to get romantically involved with something that dies when they live forever."

Chad Savage, a former Chicago resident who lives near South Bend, Ind., is a bit more forgiving, though he understands why old-school vamp fans get irritated by those who seem to think "Twilight" author Stephenie Meyer "invented vampires."

"The good thing is that 'Twilight' and projects like it are a springboard for people who wouldn't be interested in vampires otherwise," the 40-year-old said. He and his wife, Alex, are huge vampire fans, Savage said. "It might drive them to find more intelligent and mature entries in the genre."

Bucktown's Ana Temblador straddles the divide between new- and old-school vampire appreciation. The 21-year-old fan said she fell in love with vamps when she was 5 years old, watching classic films with her older sister. That doesn't stop Temblador from appreciating "Twilight," especially in its literary form. She urges other fans to realize that the original vampire formula can withstand some tweaking.

"Part of the reason that people love vampires is that they've lived so long and seen so many things, and they adapt," Temblador said. "Vampires can change with us."

Also lengthening the longevity of pop vamps: hunky hotness.

The hideous, long-eared Nosferatu of the '20s wouldn't have much of a chance against his handsome contemporaries, some local fans said.

"I like that vampires have more sex appeal," Temblador said. "People can relate to them."

Coglianese isn't buying it though, and prefers the more violent vamps in John Carpenter's "Vampires" and Quentin Tarantino's "From Dusk Till Dawn."

"A real vampire isn't going to want to be your buddy or date you," Coglianese said. "He's going to kill you."

Know your bloodsucker lore?

Bet you don't know as much about our fictional fanged friends as you think.

Sure, our bloodthirsty buds are everywhere, but RedEye is separating the Johnny-Come-Lately fans from the Bram Stoker-philes when it comes to vampire lore.

Check out these three sample questions before taking our full quiz with scores ranging from "Bite Me" (the highest) to "You Suck" (lowest) at redeyechicago.com/vampires. Warning, this bad boy is on the advanced side, so it's no stake through the heart if you flunk. And remember: You cheat no one but yourself if you Google the answers. K.K.

'Chicago Picasso'

Naledge (Duck Down Records), 99 cents on iTunes

South Shore's Naledge deserves his own exhibit for "Chicago Picasso," an eclectic, refreshing mixtape and alternative to radio rubbish. Spitting intelligently on topics from clubbing to the fame game, Naledge (half of Kidz in the Hall) holds his lyrical ground while playing host to supremely talented MCs including GLC, Rhymefest, Mickey Factz and the always on-point Bun B, who extends the favor of his flow over the crazy hot beat of "Look at Them Hips." Speaking of beats, "Picasso" offers incredible instrumental on tracks including "Southside [Bleep]," "Cool Relax," and "Round and Round." The song is set to hit iTunes and other digital outlets Tuesday, according to a rep for Duck Down Records.

'Will You Be There (Theme from Free Willy) Reprise'

Michael Jackson, 99 cents on iTunes

Yes, Michael Jackson is gone. And yes, the relentless media attention surrounding his death might be a bit overwhelming. But his music endures. This song, from the 1993 smash hit "Free Willy," about a boy and his whale, should conjure fond memories for anyone who was younger than 13 when the movie came out. There are plenty other, better Jackson songs. Still, this one's a classic. JIM WALSH, REDEYE

Scent of celebrity

Making a famous fragrance—how hard could it be?

Patrick Dempsey has done the celeb fragrance thing before. As People magazine reports, the "Grey's Anatomy" star launched his first scent, Unscripted, last summer. Now, Women's Wear Daily says he has another one in the works called Patrick Dempsey 2 that reportedly contains notes of mandarin, nutmeg, "spiced wood accord" and patchouli.

Sounds sorta froufrou to RedEye ... but we're not here to judge. In fact, the whole thing got us thinking about putting together our own celebrity fragrances (and, in some cases, improving on the ones they already have). There have been so many. All you have to do is connect the dots, right?

MJ fans can get ticket refunds

Associated Press

LONDON More than 750,000 Michael Jackson fans can get full refunds for the pop star's canceled 50-night "This is It" concert comeback extravaganza—or opt to receive souvenir tickets instead, the promoters announced Monday.

In a move that could help recoup some of its losses, L.A.-based AEG Live said fans could choose to receive the actual tickets, which it said feature graphics "inspired and designed" by Jackson, who died at age 50 Thursday in L.A.

Images of the tickets, complete with a 3-D effect, can be viewed on the Web site michaeljacksonlive.com beginning Wednesday, AEG said in a statement. Fans have until Aug. 14 to take the ticket offer. Fans spent more than $90 million on tickets, which were priced between $82 and $124, though some went for hundreds of dollars on Internet auction sites.

Meanwhile, in other Jackson news:

Mom files papers

Katherine Jackson, the singer's mother, asked a judge on Monday to name her administrator of her late son's estate so she can ensure his children—Michael Joseph Jackson Jr., known as Prince Michael, 12; Paris Michael Katherine Jackson, 11; and Prince Michael II, 7—are its beneficiaries. She was granted limited control over some of his property, but not his financial assets, which includes his stake in the massive Sony-ATV music catalog. She also was granted temporary guardianship of her grandchildren.

Funeral not set

Jackson's funeral still is in the planning stages, but his father said he would not be buried at Neverland Ranch, the sprawling playground the entertainer built in the rolling hills of Santa Barbara County.

Motown pays tribute

A musical tribute to Jackson is planned Tuesday night at Chene Park in Detroit, former home of the Motown label that launched his career. The free 7:30 p.m. concert includes performances by Serieux & Friends, HotSauce, Asiid and Velocity, the Detroit News reported.

Meds retrieved

A Los Angeles County coroner's official said Monday medications have been retrieved from Jackson's home. No details were given on the type of medications retrieved or the quantity. Two coroner's investigators and two police detectives spent several hours inside the singer's rented mansion and left with two big bags of evidence. The coroner's office performed an autopsy on Friday but deferred a decision on the cause of death, citing the need for further tests. A second, private autopsy has been requested by the family.

They do

It's official: Kendra Wilkinson and Hank Baskett are wed, according to usmagazine.com. On Sunday, a day after the wedding, Wilkinson wrote on her Web site, "Wussup everyone???? It's the new Mrs. Hank Baskett!!!!!!!!! ahhhh hahahahahha!! I can't believe I'm a married woman! yayyyyy." The couple left for their nine-day trip to St. Lucia on Sunday.

Shoeless Leo

Why was Leonardo DiCaprio left barefoot in Japan last week? Retribution from jilted fans, the New York Post reports. Leo refused to pose for photos at a temple, citing the rules, the Post reports. When he removed his shoes to enter the temple, as is custom, the fans made off with his sneakers. Not cool, people!

Alive and kicking

Breathe easy, Jeff Goldblum fans. The actor was spotted alive and well Sunday in New York, according to the New York Post. His was one of many false celebrity death rumors that circulated over the weekend after both Michael Jackson and Farrah Fawcett died Thursday. To clear up other rumors, these celebs also still are alive: Britney Spears, Bruce Willis, Miley Cyrus and Harrison Ford.

Jason Mesnick who?

Things just keep getting better for Melissa Rycroft. Rycroft, who went from "Bachelor" reject to sweetheart of "Dancing With the Stars" to "Good Morning America" correspondent is now engaged. Rycroft's boyfriend, insurance agent Tye Strickland, proposed to Rycroft in Dallas on Friday night, usmagazine.com reports. Rycroft and Strickland started dating shortly after she was unceremoniously dumped by "The Bachelor's" Jason Mesnick, according to Us.

THE DIGIT

$13 The amount 13-year-old "My Sister's Keeper" actress Abigail Breslin gets per week in allowance, she tells people.com. "I get $13 [a week] now, because I'm 13," she said. Breslin makes an estimated $2 million per flick, according to the mag.
